

Questions for panelists

- What political pressures did you face, and from whom, as you were developing a public report on physician quality?
- What evidence did you use in developing your report?
- What evidence did you have to ignore as you developed your report, because of the political pressures?
- What additional evidence might make a difference in the future in your ability to influence key stakeholders in your process?
- Would it make a difference if a national body endorsed key features of public reports in the same way that NQF now endorses measurement sets?
